JOHN HUBBS' RECKLESS STATEMENTS CORRECTED

The following letters explain themselves:

Picton, Aug. 13, 1926.

Massey-Harris Company, Ltd.,
Toronto:

Gentlemen,—This week a Conservative meeting was held in our town, Picton. Mr. John Hubbs, who was member and is again candidate. Mr. Hubbs made a statement concerning your company and this letter to you is a request for information.

To show you just what he did say, I enclose a clipping from a Picton paper of Aug. 12, 1926.

Here are the figures used by Mr. Hubbs as reported by The Picton Gazette:

"As a result of the Liberal Government monkeying with the tariff, the Massey-Harris Company had ransferred over 3000 men from its Toronto plant to its factory at Batavia, New York State. These employees are helping to build up the U.S.A. instead of Canada, he said. There are hundreds of interest that would build large manufacturing plants in Canada if they knew that there would be a stable tariff in this country, asserted Mr. Hubbs."

The Picton Times reports his statement as:

"Referring to the Massey-Harris people, Mr. Hubbs stated that before the Liberals took conrol of the ship of state, this concern employed some 4,000 men in Toronto, and but a few hundred in their plant at Batavia, N.Y. Now things are reversed, 3,800 are employed at Batavia and 800 in Toronto."

If these figures are correct please advise me by return mail. Or if they are not correct please advise what changes you did make in Toronto and Batavia plants.

This, as you will see, refers to labor employed in these two different plants. We do not know the facts. Perhaps Mr. Hubbs has this information from your office. However, I am a little surprised if the figures quoted by him are correct.

Please advise my by return mail and find stamped envelope for reply. Would like all information possible if you feel disposed to give it.

Yours truly,
S. W. Tripp,
Box 616, Picton, Ont.

The Facts From Massey-Harris

"We appreciate the inquiry which you have made, and recognizing that your object is to correct a wrong impression and to have the facts known, we are pleased to advise you that in our Canadian plants at the present time we are employing about 4,000 workmen, while in our Batavia plant we are employing about 870. Moreover, these relative figures fairly represent the numbers employed throughout the year in both countries.

"The Batavia works are engaged, it might almost be said, exclusively in the production of implements for the United States and for export trade. There are only imported into Canada from the United States plant two types of machines, and neither of these are being manufactured by us in this country. Moreover, the quantity of machines of these two types which is imported is exceedingly limited. It is our policy to keep our plants in this country employed to the fullest extent possible and to import from the Batavia plant only such implements as we find it absolutely essential to bring in."

(Signed) T. Bradshaw,
Gen. Mgr. Massey-Harris Co.

That ought to be enough to nail that falsehood.

This year the Directors of PICTON FAIR are putting forth every effort to make this year's Fair on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 7th, 8th and 9th, overshadow all former years in the matter of Exhibits, including Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Grain, Fruits, Roots and Vegetables. Attractions will be in advance of any previous year, including Music by Selected Military Band, Pageant, "International Circus" under direction of John B. Rogers Producing Co., Dalziel's Famous Midway and Shows, Races, Baseball, Baby Show and Dance. We advise all our people to take in this MODEL COUNTY FAIR of the DOMINION, for they will certainly enjoy every minute of their stay. 39-b

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY REV. C. G. TRUMBULL.
(Editor of The Sunday School Times).

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS: DUTIES TO MAN.

Sunday Aug. 29.—Exodus 20: 12-21.

Golden Text—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. (Lev. 19: 18).

It is impossible for any human being to keep the Ten Commandments unless he has been born again, and thereby has received the supernatural power of God. This is true of commandments studied last week; our duties to God; and those of this week; duties to man. Toward God, for example, we cannot "have no other Gods before" Him, unless He supernaturally enables us to put Him always first. Only a child of God can truly worship and love Him, and take His name worthily. Keeping the Commandments is living a miracle life; and that is exactly the life that God offers us in Christ. Even in Moses's day, fifteen centuries before Christ's first advent on earth the "true Israelites" lived by faith in God, and knew that they could not keep His law except by trusting Him for life and power.

Six commandments set forth duties of man to fellow-man. It is significant that every one of these is found reiterated in the New Testament, as obligations of those who are living under grace. And it is significant also that the habitual breaking of these six Commandments, their violation in the most deliberate, contemptuous, and extreme ways, seems to be acutely characteristic of today, with "self-expression" as the popular euphemism for lawlessness.

Jesus regretfully said that he believed the reason why so few people are the reason why so few people are being saved today under the preaching in our churches is that law is not being preached as it should be. He pointed out that D. L. Moody, in his great evangelistic missions, never began by preaching the grace of God. He began by declaring the law of God so powerfully that his hearers were convicted of their sins; then they saw their need of God's grace, and were ready to accept it.

Only those who put God first in their lives, and thus honor Him as their Heavenly Father, can honor their earthly father and mother, as He commands. Our earthly parents are meant to be God's representatives to us; we honor them because we owe to them our human life, as we owe to God our spiritual, eternal life. And even when children have parents who do not truly represent God, but are disloyal to Him, they are to honor and obey those parents, in so far as this does not call for actual sin. The New Testament gives the heart of this Commandment: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." (Eph. 6: 1). The tragedy of today is that so many children contemptuously laugh at this Commandment, and fulfil the prophecy: "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection.....(2 Tim. 3: 1-3). Notice how much of the Ten Commandments are included in that brief passage in Paul's Epistle to young Timothy.

"Thou shalt not kill." God was here dealing with the sin of murder, and was not touching on the matter of Governmental capital punishment, which He ordained just after the Flood (Gen. 9: 6) and reiterated over and over again in Old Testament and New. After the Commandments were given God commanded Israel to inflict the death penalty for certain sins, and in this age of grace we are told that the God-ordained sword bears not the sword (the symbol of death) in vain" (Rom. 13: 1-4).

But for the Christian, the keeping of the Sixth Commandment goes beyond merely abstaining from murder. The Lord, speaking of it, declared that even having anger in the heart was sin (Matt. 5: 21). Unless the Christian's innermost heart, life, and love to God can see, is free from the sins that would logically find expression in murder, he, like the man who breaks any of the Ten commandments, he comes under their condemnation, said our Lord. This is the miracle that only the cleansing of God can work.

And so not only adultery, but also heart-impurity, is violation of the Seventh Commandment (Matt. 5: 27, 28). Here again the miracle cleansing and keeping power of the indwelling Christ is our only safety.

Stealing and false witness are both forms of dishonesty. One robs our neighbor of [illegible] property; the other robs him of something even more valuable of intagible. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches" (Prov. 22: 1), yet how many of us have been thieves of our neighbor's good name?

A Christian business man once published an article on "The Sin That We're Not Mentioning." Not many could guess what sin he meant till he told them. It was the sin forbidden in the Tenth Commandment, covetousness. It is one of the commonest, most "respectable" sins in the lives of Christians. It has strangleholds on men and women, young and old, "pillars" and officers in the Church, Sunday School teachers, rich and poor. And it is seldom mentioned, much less condemned, in pulpit or Bible class, or even in evangelistic services. Yet the New Testament classes it with fornication (Col. 3: 5), and calls it idolatry.

Gipsy Language.

The language of the Gipsies, Romany, is said to be Hindoo dialect derived from Sanskrit. Ethnologists pretty well agree that the Gipsies are descendants of an obscure Hindoo tribe. The popular belief that Gipsies are descendants of the Egyptians has no other basis than the similarity of the two words. The word "Gipsy" as a matter of fact, is from the Bohemian, and means "vagabond." The first Gipsies appeared in England early in the sixteenth century, but were found in eastern Europe at least two centuries earlier. They are now scattered all over the world.

World's Highest Peaks.

The highest mountain peak in North America is Mt. McKinley, in Alaska, whose altitude is 20,300 feet, and the highest in South America, Mt. Aconcagua, in the Andes, on the border of Chile and Argentina, 23,080 feet. The highest mountain in the world is Mt. Everest, in the Himalayas, in Asia. Its altitude is 29,002 feet. There are several hundred mountain peaks in the Himalayas 20,000 feet or over, running to an altitude of 28,278 feet.

Cruelty in Training Birds.

Performing birds are often taught by starvation. How many are aware that the pretty doves that fly when released to the despangled artists, and form themselves into geometrical patterns on her head and outstretched arms, are often the sole survivors of hundreds which have been starved and then only fed when they perched upon an exact spot on the owner's arms.

Picturesque Lisbon.

Lisbon, the westernmost of European capitals, spreads itself in leisurely fashion over its 11 hills, extending for more than five miles along the shores of the famous Rada de Lisboa, and for more than three miles inland. Beyond the narrow channel leading out of the Rada through which flow the waters of the Tagus lies the open sea, and some 800 miles away over the horizon to the west are the Azores.

Fortune Awaits Inventor.

"Untearable" linen has long been the dream of many people, but although experiments have often been made, the way to weave an indestructible cloth is still unknown, and no one has claimed the fortune which is awaiting the inventor who solves the mystery.

Warsaw.

Warsaw is a very beautiful and imposing city as viewed from the castle at Praga across the Vistula, and contains a number of magnificent palaces, among which an ancient Saxon stronghold is the most notable. There also is the cathedral of St. John the Divine, a splendid example of gothic architecture, which dates from 1250.

H. H. HORSEY TO STRENGTHEN TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION

The Prince Edward County Branch of the Ontario Prohibition Union, realizing that the temperance question is of paramount importance, both in provincial and Dominion politics, called a mass meeting in Picton on June 22nd for the purpose of determining the attitude of the temperance electors toward the approaching elections. The meeting, after thorough discussion, appointed a Political Action Committee to secure a pledge of the party candidates to the retention and consolidation of our temperance achievements. And in the event of this pledge not being secured from one or both of the candidates, the mass meeting authorized the executive to call a convention for the purpose of nominating a straight temperance candidate to represent the temperance electors of Prince Edward.

Accordingly the Political Action Committee met in Picton on August 14 to carry out the instructions of the prohibition mass meeting. The following pledge was drawn up and a sub-committee of both Conservative and Liberal personality was appointed to visit both party candidates for the purpose of securing their signatures to the pledge.

Subsequently a pledge was submitted, with the result that the Conservative candidate, Mr. John Hubbs, refused to sign, and the Liberal candidate, Mr. H. H. Horsey, witnessed by R. J. Purdelle, signed the following pledge:—I, H. H. Horsey, Liberal candidate for the Federal constituency of Prince Edward-Lennox, pledge myself, if elected, to give the Prohibition Union of Ontario, my pledge myself to its support.

(2) And to promote and endeavor to afterward to sign, and the Liberal candidate, Mr. H. H. Horsey, witnessed by R. J. Purdelle, signed the following pledge:—I, H. H. Horsey, Liberal candidate for the Federal constituency of Prince Edward-Lennox, pledge myself, if elected, to give the Prohibition Union of Ontario, my pledge myself to its support.

(2) And to promote and endeavor to afterward to sign, and the Liberal Temperance laws, because of the weakness of the present Dominion legislation.

CYCLING ON A CHIMNEY-TOP.

Hare-Brained Exploits Usually as the Result of a Wager.

A Canadian girl in Paris recently announced her intention of getting inside a barrel and allowing herself to be rolled down the long flight of steps leading from a convent to the street, says Tit-Bits.

She was already in the barrel and the top was about to be nailed down when the police interfered and forbade the performance.

Still determined to do something striking in the barrel, and so win a bet she had made, the girl moved off to a public square, re-entered the barrel, which was then closed down, and had herself rolled round the square.

Scarcely a week passes by without some such hare-brained exploit occurring, usually as the result of a wager. Often there is a considerable element of danger, as in the feat of the cyclist who announced that he would ride his cycle down the three hundred and fifty stairs leading from the first platform of the Eiffel Tower to the ground.

He managed the first group of stairs safely, but fell off his bicycle while negotiating the second lot. Although his leg was injured, he remounted and continued his ride at breakneck speed, reaching the ground without further mishap.

For five shillings an English steeplejack performed a feat so dangerous that a film star would probably ask a small fortune for doing the same thing.

As a result of an argument with another steeplejack over the merits of their respective bicycles, this man had his machine hauled to the top of a ninety-foot chimney. With smoke belching from the chimney, the steeplejack calmly mounted his bicycle and balanced himself on the narrow ledge for two minutes. The other steeplejack then mounted the chimney and put over the five shillings which had been won by the performance of this daring feat.

Freak races, for a wager, often take amusing form. A well-known cricketer was challenged by a friend to a novel race. The mounts were Shetland ponies and the "course" lay round an hotel billiard table. Soon after the start, however, the cricketer was thrown and so lost the race.

Another curious mounted feat was that of a man who backed himself to ride through a cafe, at the most crowded hour, without breaking a single glass on the tables.

For a man to match himself against a horse in a race appears a hopeless proposition at first sight, but when the distance to be covered is considerable the odds are distinctly in favor of the man. In six days' match against a horse at the Crystal Palace, the man beat the animal easily.

The Isle of Man has produced a novel contest in the form of a "hunt-and-go" race. In this the competitors had to cover a distance of eighty miles, during which they were bound to touch the church door in all the seventeen parishes of the island. The winner covered the distance in just over twenty-four hours.

Fantastic results are sometimes made to hinge on quite normal contests. A billiards match was once played between two members of a Midland club, one of whom was bearded and the other clean-shaven.

It was agreed that should the clean-shaven man lose, he was to grow a beard, while if his opponent lost he was to be shaved there and then.

The loser was the man with the beard, and he submitted himself to the barber, with a good grace, but confessed that he was afraid to go home, as his wife knew nothing of the wager.

Substitute for Soap.

It may not be generally known that a certain plant, known as Soapwort may be used as substitute for manufactured soap.

Its juice is slimy and makes an immediate lather when used with hot water. Its cleansing properties are excellent, and experiments have shown that cotton and linen materials washed with it suffer no deterioration of the fabric and retain their original snowy whiteness. The lather is not quite so efficient with woollens, the natural oil in the latter not combining very well with the soapwort juice. Gipsies, and many French, Spanish, and Italian peasants, use the soapwort for washing clothes by bruising the root of the plant and boiling it with the soiled linen. But very little is required, for a couple of medium-sized roots are sufficient for a family washing.

Here and There

Following a recent tour of western Canada, W. J. Smith, former editor of the "Farmer's Sun", writes that he will be surprised if the aggregate wheat crop of the Prairie Provinces falls below 400,000,000 bushels. "It will not be surprising if the 500,000,000 mark is nearly reached," states Mr. Smith.

Eleven hundred farms will be needed next year to accommodate the British settlers who will be brought to western Canada, according to Major E. J. Ashton, commissioner of the Soldiers' Settlers Board. So far this year 1,480 families were placed on farms in the prairie provinces by this organization.

Hogs to the value of $400,000 were shipped from the Prince Albert district in 1925. This sum was far in advance of that received the previous year and the increase was due to a considerable extent to the activities of the agricultural society booming hog production. This year the hog raisers' slogan is one million dollars worth of hogs, and from present indications this mark is more than likely to be attained.

Arrangements for the export of large quantities of British Columbia seed potatoes to California are being made by a potato grower of that state. The British Columbia potatoes are desired in California for seed purposes because they introduce new strength into the southern strain. Experiments were made with Canadian grown seed last year in California and growers were well satisfied with the results.

A flock of 46 sheep, comprising 35 ewes and 11 rams, has been purchased by an official of the Dominion Government under instruction from the Soviet Government for dispatch to Vladivostok, as soon as arrangements can be made for their shipment. Last year quite a number of prize-winning cattle were shipped from British Columbia to Russia and this new order indicates that previous shipments have been satisfactory.

Many valuable shipments of furs from the great trapping areas of the Hudson Bay Company are arriving through the Dominion Express at Montreal. These unimposing bales, piled high on the trucks often represent a total value of $200,000. After being collected at the various Hudson Bay posts along Hudson Bay and James Bay the furs are brought down by canoe in summer and dog team in winter to the northern terminus of the T. and O. Railway.

Remarkable expansion of passenger traffic into and out of Montreal has been reported during July and August by the passenger department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The "Red Wing" and the "Alouette" on the Boston run and the "Rideau" and "York" to Toronto, four new trains de-luxe placed on these routes early in the year have been running with capacity loads. Eastward to Quebec there is heavy traffic for the Ancient Capital, while trains running north into the Laurentians, it is stated, have never been so filled as is the case this summer.

A musculange, 35 pounds in weight, with a length of 50 inches and a girth of 21 inches, was taken from the French River near the French River Bungalow Camp recently, according to information received by the tourist department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. This fine fish was taken by E. A. Parintosh of New York with a 30-lb. silk cast line and using Club Minnow bait. To date this is the largest fish caught this year to be entered in the annual French River Bungalow Camp Trophy competition.

To Drive Moths From a Piano.

When moths get into a piano the best means of ejecting them is to make up a mixture of turpentine, benzoline and oil of lavender, and squirt this inside the instrument with a scent spray. Use seven parts of benzoline to one of turpentine; add a few drops of lavender to each ounce.

The Husband in Charge.

Wife—"Considering how long I've been away, I think you might have made some preparations to receive me." Husband—"You do me injustice, my dear. I have had the library and parlor thoroughly cleaned and aired." Servant (interrupting)—"Please, sir, the man has come with a barrow for them empty bottles."

A Nincompoop.

"Nincompoop" is a most entirely satisfying and refined way of calling a person a fool or blockhead or a simpleton. It is a corruption of the Latin phrase "non compos mentis"—not sound of mind. Besides being satisfying and refined it has a classical origin in addition.

Dogs of War.

On July 28, 1838, General Zachary Taylor, afterward president of the United States, requested the government to furnish him with bloodhounds to be used in hunting the Seminole Indians of Florida. He was furnished with the dogs.

Here and There

A total of 500,000 trout fry from the Banff hatchery have been placed in Sylvan Lake and 900,000 in Buffalo Lake, during the past week. A further consignment is to be placed in the tributary waters of the Red Deer River.

Export of pilchard oil to Europe will commence in bulk in September, Prodoors have contracted to ship 600 tons on each ship of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., for several months. The market is in Rotterdam. The company will have about two ships per month. Pilchard oil is used in preparing foods and medicines.

Another step forward in the effort to restore to Montreal its leading position in the live stock industry was taken recently when members of the Eastern Cattle Market Exchange met to reorganize their operations on the basis of new changes made calculated to improve Montreal's standing in the industry.

Duke Dmitri, of Leuchtenberg, Count de Beauharnois, lineal descendant of Charles, Marquis de Beauharnois, who governed Canada in the name of the French King Louis XV. between 1726 and 1747, is visiting for the first time the country in which his ancestor made history. He is taking part in the Grand Tow-Pow of the Canadian Trail Riders which is being held in Ptarmigan Valley, near Lake Louis, in the Canadian Rockies.

The English football team have finished their seven weeks' tour of the Dominion and they were greatly impressed with the generous hospitality tendered to them by the people in the cities they visited. Joe Smith, captain of the team, said: "Canadian football will, in a few years, in all probability be on a par with the brand of soccer played by the major leagues in Great Britain." According to him the object of the tour has been fully accomplished.

Coming from all parts of Great Britain and Ireland twenty-five thoroughbreds were unloaded from the Canadian Pacific liner Montagama when it arrived in Montreal lately. They are for Mulan's breeding and training ranch near Winnipeg, and comprise one stallion, 16 mares and eight geldings. Nellie's Pet, 3-year-old, by Cygnus (Sire of winner of Scottish Derby last year) out of La Lis; and Dentan, two-year-old, who comes of the same breeding as Coronach, winner of this year's English Derby, were among the horses arriving.

Captain Kilroy Harris, lecturer and radio talker in the United States on Australia and New Zealand, recently passed through Montreal on his way to the west where he will take part in the Trail Rides in the Canadian Rockies. He is already possessor of a silver medal for having completed 100 miles of trail rides and hopes this year to earn the gold medal that testifies to the completion of 500 miles riding trails in that district. Capt. Harris is gathering material from Canadian sources for his lectures and radio talks.

Reports from the Banff Springs Hotel and from agents along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Banff to the Pacific Coast received at C.P.R. headquarters, state that the forest fires in the Kootenay Park region at their nearest point are eighty miles distant from the hotel, and that they are nowhere near any of the tracks of the railway. Guests at the hotel and travellers on the railroad have been in no way incommoded by the fires and these are now stated to be well within sight of control. Banff Springs Hotel is at the present time enjoying the busiest season in its history.

When Tobacco Was Taboo.

In 1638 the Massachusetts general court ordered, a writer comments, "that no man shall take any tobacco within 20 poles of any house, or so near as may endanger the same." In 1798 an act was passed forbidding the carrying of fire through the streets except in a covered vessel, smoking, or having in one's possession "any lighted pipe or segar" in the streets or on the wharves. The penalty was $2. If the offender was in a ropewalk, the penalty was from $5 to $100. This prohibition of 1798 was not repealed until 1880.

Deaf and Dumb Language.

The Encyclopedia Britannica says: "We have conversed by signs with deaf people from all parts of the British Isles, from France, from Norway and Sweden, Poland, Finland, Italy, Russia, Turkey, the United States and found that they are indeed a world-wide means of communication. Deaf people in America converse with Red Indians with ease, thereby showing how natural the generality of even del Epee, signs are."

Steel and Iron.

Steel is a kind of iron which can easily be hammered out thin without cracking and can be made extremely hard by being heated and then cooled quickly. It is different from ordinary iron because of the amount of carbon in it. Wrought iron contains less carbon than steel and so it cannot be made so hard; cast iron contains more and so is brittle.

THE INDIAN LETTER-WRITER.

Occupation Is the Outcome of the Illiteracy of the Masses.

The letter-writer is a familiar figure in India, and his occupation is the outcome of the illiteracy of the masses.

His calling is not confined to any particular class or creed. Hence he is to be seen in nearly every city and village. He very often acquires an elementary knowledge of the three R's, at a primary school. This enables him to "trade" on those who are ignorant of letters!

He usually settles down to business in bazaars, or in the vicinity of post office, or court or law. His stock-in-trade consists, as a rule, of a small box, which is used occasionally as a desk, a supply of writing material, postcards, postage stamps and envelopes, and money order and telegraph forms. It is supplemented, sometimes by an old typewriter—an object of attraction rather than of practical utility!

A letter-writer's income averages anything over a rupee a day, in industrial cities; and between eight to twelve annas, in smaller towns. It is derived from all sorts and conditions of men who come to him for the reading or writing of their letters, and cheerfully pay for his services. As payment is not regulated by a fixed scale of charges, it varies, from a pice to two to three annas a letter, according to locality, the means of the customer, the nature of the communication and its urgency.

The Reason For His Tears.

The chaplain of a lunatic asylum asked a brother clergyman to officiate during his absence. Before going away he said: "Preach your best, for, though insane on some points, they are very intelligent."

The substitute did his best; he tried to move them to pity about the mothers in India who throw their babies into the Ganges as an offering to their false gods.

Tears streamed down the face of one listener, who was evidently greatly affected. The gratified preacher asked him afterwards what part of the sermon had touched his heart.

The hearer replied, sadly: "I was thinking what a pity it was your mother didn't throw you into the Ganges!"

Story of the Mirror.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century small mirrors, carried in the pocket or attached to the girdle, were regarded as indispensable adjuncts to ladies' toilets. The pocket mirror was a circular plaque of polished metal fixed in a shallow box and covered with a lid.

Neat Blarney.

"Why don't you have as good stuff asked a tourist one day in the Glen at the Downs, Ireland, of his driver. "It is out of respect to the departed sassenach, yer honor—he wants ye to see it all. And this he's an intelligent beast, and appreciates good company, as wants to rape the like o' ye in ould Ireland as long as he can."

Bird Friends of Gardener.

Few people realize the value of birds in keeping garden insects under control. Even the despised English sparrow sometimes eats a worm. I have watched them for hours, busily chasing moths which the birds go after with far more energy than they ever display in gathering seeds.—Exchange.

When Sneezing Was a Bad Omen.

Sneezing from remote times has been held ominous. Our forefathers went to bed again if they sneezed while putting on their shoes. A sneeze to the right was deemed lucky; to the left of evil portent. To sneeze near a burial place was unlucky.

Monkeys Hard to Train.

Performing monkeys seldom live more than a few months. Many of them die of fright while being trained, and it is consequently necessary for trainers to keep a large number of animal understudies.

Musical Taste.

Composer—"I've got a new song that's bound to make a hit." Concert Manager—"Any sense in it?" "None at all." "Any fun in it?" "Not a bit." "Any music in it?" "Not a note." "Quite right! You've got a success!"

Dickens as an Editor.

Charles Dickens was an editor for a third of a century. He began with Bentley's Miscellany in 1837 and was editing All the Year Round when he died in 1870.

British Statesmen Tour Canada

Twenty-one members of the United Kingdom's delegation to the Empire Parliamentary Association conferences in Australia in the fall who arrived at Quebec on the S.S. "Empress of Scotland." The delegation is headed by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, former Secretary of State for Home Affairs and vice-chairman of the delegation. The Marquis of Salisbury who is chairman, arrived in Canada earlier and will meet the delegation in Vancouver when they will sail on the S.S. "Aorangi" for the Commonwealth. Travelling over the Canadian Pacific lines, the Parliamentarians will tour leisurely across Canada visiting most of the principal cities making a study of conditions in this Dominion. A motor trip from Banff to some of the beauty spots in the Canadian Pacific Rockies is anticipated before the party embark for the Antipodes.

The conferences in Australia will be of an informal nature, taking place in all the states of the Commonwealth. They will be met in Australia by representatives of the parliaments of the Union of South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Malta, New Zealand and the Legislature of British India. The delegation is going to assist in the celebrations in connection with the opening of the new Australian capital, but at the same time an intensive study of conditions in that Dominion will be made. They will obtain first hand knowledge on economic problems and trade development and a study of the Dominion's affairs as a whole will be made. Conference of a similar nature will be held every two years following an agreement reached at the 1924 South African meeting.

"PARLIAMENT HILL"

STANDS THREE HUNDRED FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL.

This Beautiful Spot Covers an Area of About Thirty Acres — Building Was Burnt Down In 1916, But a Still More Beautiful One Has Been Erected on Same Site.

When Ottawa was chosen by Queen Victoria, in 1860, as the Capital of the United Canadas, the Hill was considered an ideal spot upon which to erect the Parliament Buildings. Since that time Parliament Hill has become one of the most interesting spots in Canada. The Houses of Parliament, of which the late King Edward laid the corner-stone, were destroyed by fire on the night of Feb. 3, 1916. A still more beautiful building has been erected on the site of the first Houses. The corner-stone of the new building was laid on September 1, 1916, by the Duke of Connaught, the Governor-General and brother of the late King Edward; and on September 1, 1919, the corner-stone of the tower of the new Houses of Parliament was laid by the Prince of Wales then paying his first visit to Canada.

When the first Houses of Parliament were being constructed the Eastern and the Western Blocks were built for the use of the various Departments of Government, and about seven years later were built the Library Building and the building of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Parliament Hill is a promontory or bluff, writes Michele Trentadue, in the Montreal Weekly Star. It stands three hundred feet above sea level and about 170 feet above the Ottawa river. Upon this hill the Parliament Buildings were built. Originally Parliament Hill, formed part of one of two lots acquired by Jacob Carman in 1802 by Crown patent. The property changed hands with the rest of the lot on Concession "C" and the lot on Concession "D," the boundaries of which extended from Pooley's bridge on the west, Wellington street on the south, Rideau River on the east, and the Ottawa River and Cathcart street on the north. The boundary between the two lots was Cumberland street, and both lots covered an area of about 600 acres. The whole was sold for £10, or about $50.

Parliament Hill proper now covers an area of about 30 acres. It is bounded on the north by the Ottawa River, on the east by the Rideau Canal, on the west by Bank Street, and on the south by Wellington Street. A beautiful stone and iron fence runs along the entire front, parallel to Wellington Street, surmounted at intervals by short electric light standards, each carrying a group of five large globes. These are kept lighted all night, presenting an extremely brilliant scene. Trees, shrubbery of all kinds, and flower beds of endless variety and of every hue, ornament the grounds, turning the spot into what might be termed a place of beauty.

The three buildings placed there, form a hollow square 700 feet in width and 600 feet in depth. The Parliament Houses or the Main Building with the Parliamentary Library in rear, standing in the centre, and the two Departmental buildings upon either side facing inwards, form three sides.

On the eastern side of the Main Building is the statue of Sir John A. Macdonald, first Premier of Canada, and one of the founders of Confederation. Not far away are the twin statues of Robert Baldwin and Sir Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, whose names are known to history as the heads of the Lafontaine-Baldwin administration, and apostles of "Responsible Government."

On the west side of the Central Building is a grand monument of Queen Victoria, which was unveiled by her Majesty's grandson, King George V., on September 21, 1901, when he paid a visit to Canada as Duke of York with the Duchess (now Queen Mary). The statue is in bronze and of heroic size, supported by an emblematic group, the whole being mounted on a lofty pedestal. This magnificent work of art is by Hebert, a French-Canadian sculptor. The base on which the monument was erected is the highest piece of ground in the city of Ottawa, being 300 feet above sea level and about 170 feet above the Ottawa River. Two Russian siege guns, captured by the British army at Sebastopol in 1855 after eleven months of siege during the Crimean War, are there placed at her Majesty's feet pointing towards the Chaudiere Falls.

On the same side of the terrace, in close proximity thereto and overlooking the river and Chaudiere Falls, a noble bronze statue was erected to the memory of Sir George Cartier (nicknamed a man of one idea), one of the Fathers of Confederation, who gave his name to Cartier Square. A little further on is another bronze statue, that of Alexander Mackenzie, the second Premier of the Dominion. Still further on is a bronze statue of George Brown, another Father of Confederation. In the rear of the Parliament Main Building is the statue of Thomas D'Arcy McGee, who was the victim of political assassination in Ottawa on April 7, 1866, the centenary of whose birth was fittingly celebrated in 1925.

The site of Ottawa, the Federal capital, was visited by white men early in Canadian history. The great river that comes down from the west and joins the St. Lawrence at the head of the Island of Montreal was one of the two waterways to the Great Lakes, and because of its remoteness from the land of the Iroquois, it was safer of the two for the French and their Indian allies. At different places in the valley of the river, and especially on the north side, dwelt several tribes of the great Algonquin family. One of the largest and best known was the Ottawas, who were found as far west as the Great Lakes. The river that flowed through their country was given their name, and in later times it was most appropriately given to the city that grew up beside the river and eventually became the seat of the government of Canada.

Expensive and Unnecessary.

The fact that of all the buttons that have been given out to be testimony to the wearers' participation in the performance of public duty few are worn should be admonition to put the time consumed in the making of such buttons, and the money spent to pay for them, to better use.—Albany Journal.

Small Daily Task.

Nothing surely is so potent as a law that may not be disobeyed. It has the force of the water-drop that hollows the stone. A small daily task, if it be really daily, will beat the labors of a spasmodic Hercules.—Anthony Trollope.

"Catsup."

The word "catsup," which is spelled "catsup," "catchup," "ketchup" and "kitchup," is a corruption of the Chinese word "kitjap," the name given to an inferior kind of soy made in China.

A Little Girl's Problem.

The years have taught some sweet, some bitter lessons—none wiser than this: to spend in all things else, but of old friends to be most miserly.—Lowell.

LOST FORESTS OF BRITAIN.

During Reign of Elizabeth There Was More Forest Than Field.

It is difficult to think of England as she was in the days of the Norman Kings, a vast forest interspersed with small clearings here which cultivated fields clustered round small towns or villages. From sea level right up to a height of 1,400 feet trees were everywhere.

Even so late as the reign of Elizabeth there was more forest than field; stroke tells us that there were then sixty-nine royal forests in England. Huge woods pressed close upon London. Epping and Windsor were real forests and nearly all Buckinghamshire was heavily timbered. The great forest of Wychwood covered a large part of Oxfordshire, while Northamptonshire, now so bare, had three forests of its own.

It was the metal workers who were the first great destroyers of English forests. First in Sussex, where the iron workers cut down all the beautiful woods clothing the swelling downs, then in Shropshire, where at last the famine in timber became so complete that Dudley was driven to experiment with coal as fuel for smelting iron, experiments which resulted in the discovery of coke.

And all through the Middle Ages the tinners of Devon and Cornwall were stripping the river valleys of their wealth of hard wood for use in the blowing houses of which one may still see the ruins along the moorland streams.

Then came the French wars of the eighteenth century and the great revival in agriculture, and woods could hardly be cleared fast enough to grow corn. Even then some areas of woodland were protected and a certain amount of planting was done, since British ships were all built of wood they had to have oak for hulls and fir for masts and spars.

So late as 1861 the British Admiralty were in possession of five million dollars' worth of timber for building battleships. But shipbuilders had already discovered that 275 feet was about the maximum length for a vessel built of wood, so iron and steel supplanted oak, and British forests dwindled fast.

In 1914, when the Great War broke out, the area of British woodlands was not quite 4,000,000 acres, or only a very small percentage of the land of the country. The war famine in timber caused a terrible drain upon Britain's remaining resources, and about 450,000 acres of the poor remnants of the woodlands were stripped bare.

NINE MURDERS IN 1925.

Quebec Has Reputation for Respect of Law and Order.

According to statistics just published in an extra of the Quebec Official Gazette, the district of Quebec maintained in a striking manner during 1925 its reputation for the respect of law and order and its low ratio of crime of every kind. On the other hand, the Montreal district, which, of course, comprises the metropolis of the Dominion, heads the list in the matter of offences of every description against the Criminal Code of Canada.

The Court of King's Bench had 278 indictments and in 251 "true bills" were returned by grand juries. Nine of those cases were for murder, of which five were in the district of Montreal, three in the district of Hull, and one in the district of Richelieu.

There were eleven attempted murders of which seven were in the Montreal district, two in Roberval, one in Hull, and one in Terrebonne. Of the twelve manslaughter cases, eight were from the Montreal district, three in the district of Quebec, and one in Richelieu. There were 28 cases of aggravate assault, of which ten were in Montreal, four in Pontiac three in Terrebonne, three in Chicoutimi, two in Robe-cal, and only one in Quebec, one in Caspe, one in Hull, and one in Kamouraska.

Of the 18 burglaries there were 12 in Montreal, 2 in Roberval, and 1 in Quebec and Terrebonne respectively. Quebec had only two thefts, against Montreal's 40; Roberval, 2; Terrebonne, 6; Hull, 7; and Chicoutimi, 4; out of a total of 61 in which indictments were returned in the Court of King's Bench.

Preferred the Sign Up.

After the epidemic had been checked, an old negress protested vigorously when the health officers started to take down the sign they had put up on her house.

"Why don't you want us to take it down?" one of the officers asked.

"There ain't be'n a bill collectah neah dis house sence dat sign was nailed up. You all please let it along?"

Why Hair Stands on End.

When hair stands on end on the back of a dog or cat when frightened it is moved by tiny muscles attached to the roots. The hair follicle is like a little seed buried in the flesh. Attached to either side of this seed are tiny muscles that run diagonally through the flesh from the lower part of the follicle. These little muscles are like the guy ropes of a tent. They are what are called the erector muscles, and when fear or cold is experienced these muscles promptly tighten up in such a manner as to "hoist" the hair very quickly.

Arctic Night.

Viewed solely as a matter of optics, the Arctic night is as dark as any night. Explorers in high latitudes say, however, that there are many alleviations of the obscurity. The stars flash keenly, the moon comes along in a regular succession of phases, the snow surface relieves the gloom under conditions of the utmost absence of light, and the aurora borealis is the finest kind of illuminant. Explorers all agree that their men pass the winter night without much difficulty if only there are means of amusement.

The Amazon.

The Amazon discharges the largest amount of water of any river in the world, and the St. Lawrence next. Other interesting facts about these rivers are that the length of the Amazon is 3,300 miles and its width varies from a few hundred feet at different points to more than 100 miles at its mouth. The St. Lawrence is 2,200 miles in length, is from one to several miles wide at places to ninety miles at its mouth.

Abbreviations.

The letters i. e. are an abbreviation of the Latin phrase "id est," meaning "that is," and the letters e. g. an abbreviation of another Latin phrase "exempli gratia," having the meaning of "for the sake of example" and "for instance." Vs. is an abbreviation of the Latin word versus, meaning "against." Vice versa is a phrase meaning "the order or relation of terms being reversed."

Dreaming of Cats.

To dream of cats is said not to be lucky. If you dream of a black cat your enemies are active; to be bitten by one indicates misfortune; burials are about when a cat follows you in a dream; while to dream you are stroking one means beware of false friends.

Lang Indian Name.

The longest geographical Indian name is probably that of Lake Cheroagogmaunchaugagogchebunnyungamaug. This lake is in Massachusetts and its name has recently been changed to Lake Webster. The word is of Algonquin origin and is said to mean "How the south wind made a long water where many blackbirds chatter.

Century-Old Chapel Converted Into Barn.

The timbers which have formed a part of the old Methodist Church, Newburgh, known as the Switzer's Chapel, which is over 100 years old, have again been brought into service. Some years ago the old chapel was sold and moved three miles to make way for the new brick structure. Recently the timbers were purchased by J. W. Ramsay, and when the old barns on the Aylesworth farm, in which Sir Allen Aylesworth, Toronto, and his brothers, worked and played during their early days, were destroyed by fire, he decided to use the old framework of Switzer's Chapel in rebuilding.

Baled Straw.

The Hinde & Dauch Paper Company, of Canada, Ltd., Trenton, Ontario, expects to start operation of its plant in that city this coming year. They are now taking in baled wheat and rye straw in carload lots, team and truck deliveries. Farmers having any of this material for sale should communicate with them, as it is an excellent opportunity for the producers of straw to get rid of their surplus stock. They are not purchasing oat or barley straw. Threshers should, therefore, keep their wheat and rye straw separate from the oat and barley straw. This is an opportunity for farmers who have small presses to combine with their neighbors' supply and press the straw at times when they are not busy with their farm work; also for the large pressers to purchase from their farmers who have not the baling facilities, and sell to the Paper Company.

Opening of Schools in September.

The Public Schools of the Province open on Wednesday, Sept. 1st and the Collegiate Institutes and High Schools on Tuesday, Sept. 7th. Applications for admission to the Napanee Collegiate Institute should be sent to the principal, Dr. G. W. Morden, at Napanee, stating what course the pupil is desirous of enrolling in. The courses are: General, Teachers', Matriculation, Commercial. Only a limited number will be admitted to the Commercial Course—those having a high standing at the entrance examinations or have put in at least one year in the Collegiate. The Commercial Course is very difficult and requires more than ordinary preparation in order that a pupil may be able to complete the work of the first year successfully in that course. Former pupils should notify the principal of their intentions to return, so that provision may be made for their accommodation.

Presentation.

On August 20th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Smith, South Napanee, was the scene of an event which will not soon be forgotten by those who were present, when about forty-five neighbours and friends gathered to bid them farwell before leaving for their new home in Toronto. Mr. F. W. Harrell acted as chairman for the evening. After calling order an address was read by Mr. N. B. Miller and Miss MacConnachie presented Mr. and Mrs. Smith with a purse of gold, Miss Wescott also being remembered by the gift of a gold piece. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were totally taken by surprise, and after a suitable reply the evening was spent in conversation and music. A duet contributed by Mrs. B. Elliott and Mr. Garrett was most appropriate to the occasion. Refreshments were served after which all joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Each one felt like lingering just a little longer, but all good things come to an end, so each one regretted that they had spent a profitable evening, wended their way homeward, wishing the Smith family bon voyage through life.

Another event occurred on August 10th, when Miss Wescott was presented with a handsome leather purse by the Friendly Bible Class of Grace United Church, of which she was a member. Miss Wescott will be much missed in church circles.

SOFTBALL

In the last league fixture, Napanee Leafs defeated Belleville Beavers at Riverdale Park, on Tuesday last, by a score of 13-2.

Playing good ball all the way, they were the much superior team on the night's play, and when Leaf's are going well, they can give any team a good battle. Dorothy Johnston pitched the whole game again, holding the Beavers to six well scattered hits, and behind her the fielders played ball that was practically perfect, only four misplays occurring. No outstanding player can be mentioned, as each performed with equal brilliance.

Beavers have been the most unfortunate team in the league in the matter of injuries, and as usual, late in the game, Miss Lee aggravated an old injury to her knee, and had to retire from the game. As Beavers had only nine players with them, Napanee loaned them Mary Bates, who did good work in the outfield for her old opponents.

It was the superiority of Napanee with the bat that accounted for the big lead, all the players getting one or more hits, for a total of 9 safe wallops, Misses O'Neil, Embury, Douglas and Richardson getting three each.

John Coulter, Native of Tamworth, Dies Here.

John Coulter, 55, died following an apoplectic stroke suffered at his home at 7 Camp avenue at 5 o'clock Sunday morning. Mr. Coulter was in bed at the time. He had had several strokes preceding this, the first occurring about eight years ago. Since that time, Mr. Coulter has been in ill health, being in the condition of a semi-invalid during the past eight years. Mr. Coulter, who was born in Tamworth, Ontario, Canada, March 19, 1871, son of the late John and Margaret B. Coulter, had lived in this city for the greater part of his life. He had been an employee of the H. H. Babcock company for 35 years preceding his first stroke and had been connected with the company since early youth, being one of the oldest employes, in point of service. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Eva (Annalsyne Coulter, of this city, one son, Sterling J. Coulter, of New Mexico, and one sister, Mrs. Tillie Taylor, of Ottawa, Canada. Funeral services, from the home at 2.30 Tuesday afternoon last, with Rev. C. J. Rayner, officiating. Interment was made in the North Watertown cemetery.—Watertown Times.

Wins Wagar Trophy.

The Odessa baseball team is the winner of the Lennox and Addington Baseball League, which carries with it the Captain Wagar Trophy. The final game of the play-off, which was necessary to declare a winner, took place at Newburgh on Saturday afternoon and Odessa was the victor by a score of 17 to 12. When the league games were played Odessa and Adolphustown were tied in the number of games won and lost. It was decided to play two games and if each team should win a game a third game would take place. In the first game of the play-off Odessa was beaten by a score of 6 to 4, when the game was played at Odessa. Adolphustown lost its home game, which was played on Friday last, by a score of 14 to 2. The league champions have certainly made a good record this year, having won nine of the scheduled games and lost three and two of the play-off contests. It is expected that Odessa and Belleville will be matched in the next round of the O.A.B.A. Whether or not home games will be played is not certain, but it is understood that Odessa is willing to play a sudden death game at Belleville, providing they can get a guarantee to cover expenses. Mat Coyne, of Kingston, who has had charge of the Odessa team for the past week or ten days, has certainly improved the team play.

Belleville, Aug. 23.—Frank Blakely, of Newburgh, a 70-year-old man, who stands six feet two inches in his stocking feet, and who had to be overpowered by two Provincial officers before he was captured, was fined $400 and sentenced to two months, or, in default of fine, five months, in Police Court today, for keeping liquor for sale. The officers went into ambush to meet Blakely and his rig. Perched alongside of Blakely on the seat was a high-powered rifle fully loaded. At first Blakely said he would use the rifle on anyone who cleared for him. He was overpowered after a struggle and taken to Newburgh, in his wagon were found five bottles of alleged home brew, which were confiscated.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE PROHIBITION UNION

In last week's Picton papers, an article appears handed in by A. A. Morden, Liberal, president of the Prince Edward Prohibition Union, stating that John Hubbs refused to sign a pledge to support certain principles advocated by the Prohibition Union.

Mr. Hubbs states that he DID NOT REFUSE TO SIGN this pledge, but, since he regarded it as a Liberal election "dodge," he wanted Mr. Horsey to sign it first. After securing Mr. Horsey's signature, officials of the Union never came back to Mr. Hubbs for his signature, but simply published a misleading report of the matter in the local papers.

Moreover, A. A. Morden, president, and R. W. Ireland, Treasurer of the Prince Edward Prohibition Union, came to Picton as delegates to the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association Convention on Saturday, July 31st, and pledged themselves to support the Liberal candidate, H. H. Horsey, before asking the Liberal and Conservative candidates to sign their Prohibition Union pledge.

As proof of the above facts, Ex-Mayor H. G. Blakely has written the following signed statement.

THE PROHIBITION UNION QUESTION

At the request of Mr. John Hubbs I wish to make the following statement in reference to the article published in the Picton papers last week re the Prohibition Union Pledge.. This is to certify that as Vice President of this organization I was requested to present this pledge to Mr. John Hubbs, the Conservative candidate. This I did. Mr. Hubbs did not sign, but expressed his willingness to do so provided Mr. Horsey signed. This is the report I made to Mr. A. A. Morden and Mr. R. W. Ireland, President and Treasurer of the Prince Edward Prohibition Union.

(Signed) H. G. Blakely.

MEIGHEN ON AUTOMOBILES

BY R. J. DEACHMAN

Throughout his Eastern campaign—and the same thing will happen in the West—Mr. Meighen told his audience that the Liberals did not reduce he duty on automobiles but that they added to the taxes on clothing. This is complex :

If they didn't reduce the tariff why did 4,000 Oshawa people travel down to Ottawa to protest against the reduction ? I sat in Keith's Theatre in Ottawa and listened to that delegation. Never in my life have I seen a more tense crowd—one more violently in earnest. They were convinced that the bottom had dropped out of Heaven. Yet these people came down, according to Mr. Meighen, because the Liberals failed to reduce the tariff on automobiles. How magnificently absurd.

WORSE AND WORSE.

Then take the next story : They tell us that there has been an increase in the import of automobiles, due to the reduction of the duty—the reduction which in the next breath they tell us has never taken place. It is to laugh.

Now, let us try to get this matter straight. The tariff on automobiles was 35%. The Liberals reduced it to 20% (applicable to all cars under $1200 in value). Later on they removed the sales tax on Canadian made automobiles and left it on the imported. Personally I think that in removing the sales tax they made a mistake. True, it was purely a question of lowering taxation and the reduction of taxation is a fundamental of Liberal faith—it is an eternal duty of Liberal policy to reduce taxes increased by Tory extravagance and stupidity, but the objection I hold against this action had a far different basis. The Tory front benchers are notoriously unscrupulous in the presentation of political argument. Lowering the sale tax gave them just precisely the opportunity they sought. It enabled them to confuse the issue in the public mind. I object to it, not because it was bad economics, but because it was bad political strategy. Meighen, Bennett et al are following precisely that policy. They now tell us that the tariff was not reduced. Let us examine that still further.

TWICE NOTHING IS NOTHING.

It it was not reduced then a Liberal Government can perform precisely the same operation again and again without lowering the tariff. Even Mr. Meighen will admit that. All right ; the tariff now stands at 20% on cars under $1,200 in value. Cut it another 15% as was done by the Robb Budget this year, and it will stand at 5%. Add 5% sales tax and then we would have a tariff of 5% and a sales tax of 10%. Would Mr. Meighen continue to say that the tariff had not been reduced even then ? He must say so. If no reduction was made by Mr. Robb this year and he makes the same reduction next year, then so long as two times nothing equals nothing, there must be no reduction. That is sound arithmetic. "Billy" Moore told an audience the other day that he had taught Arthur Meighen constitutional history in the University, and he (Moore) must have been a poor teacher or Arthur a poor student, for he seemed to know little of it now. Mr. Meighen's mathematical teacher seems to have been as much at fault as his teacher of constitutional history.

TRY AGAIN, MR. MEIGHEN

Apply, if you please, another test. The average rate of duty on all dutiable goods entering Canada in 1925 was 23.3%. Suppose the Liberals made a cut in the tariff equal to 15% all round—the average rate would then be 8.3%. If they made a definite proposal to do just that, what would Mr. Meighen say ? Well, if I know anything about Mr. Meighen, he would vociferate like an infuriated animal or in simpler language, roar like a bull about the ruin of the country, even at the bare suggestion. Yet, when precisely that is done with automobiles, coupled with a reduction of 5% in the sales tax, Mr. Meighen says : "No reduction has been made, none whatever. All Grits are malodorous shams." Who now do you think is the sham ? Let us leave out the malodorous part of it.

TAXES ON CLOTHES

Now let us turn to the other end of the argument. Mr. Meighen says they raised the taxes on clothing 66 2-3%. Mr. Meighen here refers to the sales tax—not to the general tax on clothing—he is careful to obscure that fact. I explained the other day why certain taxes had to be increased. The reason was that the budget had to be balanced—the Tories left behind a deficit of over $81,000,000. The Drayton budget of 1921 raised the sales tax on all imported goods to 4%. The Liberals later raised it to 6%, but extended the exemptions. They then lowered it to 5% and further extended the exemptions. But moving a tax up 4% to 5% even if made all along the line, is not 66 2-3%, but only 25%. Again, we have the new Meighenistic mathematics. But that's not all.

Mr. Meighen never considers a drop in the tariff as a lowering of taxation. The Liberal government in 1922 lowered the tariff upon clothing 2½% and later on reduced it still further by adding to the reductions under the British preference, when goods were landed at a Canadian port. The effect of these reductions was far greater than the small increase in the sales tax applied as a pure revenue tax. If you doubt this, compare the price of clothing today with the price before the Liberals came into power. There is no doubt, prices are lower. In fact, the Tories tell us that the woolen industry has been ruined by these reductions. That, too, is false, but its complete refutation can wait for another day.

ON LUXURIES.

Now we come to the final claim of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen. It was like this : The lowering of the auto tariff—which, according to him was never lowered at all—and the removal of the sales tax favors the rich and discriminates against the poor. These tears from Mr. Meighen's millionaire cabinet, rattling like hail on a green house roof are very intriguing. They come with good grace from the Leader of a party whose henchmen in the Senate killed the Old Age Pensions Bill. But let us see. The auto tariff had remained unchanged since 1906. When it was first established the auto may have been a luxury. Today it is an ordinary farm utility. The tariff on every other single farm utility had been lowered—lowered by both political parties. Why hold the automobile up as a special subject for abnormal taxation ? Remember that in many lines the competition is from Great Britain. The British preference applies and so the tariff protection is lower. Almost our entire import of automobiles comes from the U.S. and hence the general tariff, not the Preference, really applies. Let us take a few items by way of comparison, giving the British Preference rates in each case :

Boots	17½ %
Knit goods	20%
Grey cotton (Unbleached)	12½ %
White botton fabric	15 %
Flannels	20%
Harness	17½ %
Rubber boots	15%
Waterproof clothing	20%

THE PREFERENCE WORKS

These are products where the goods can be imported from Great Britain or come in at slightly higher rates from France or Italy. The manufacturers of automobiles meets only American competition—the lower rates of the Preference scarcely touching him. Why should we single him out as the spoiled darling of an extreme amount of tariff protection. Why should we penalize the user of an automobile with a tariff higher than almost any other article of common use in the whole of our tariff schedules. Meanwhile, what has happened to the industry ? The tariff has been lowered, sharply lowered. The industry has plunged forward. Lowered tariffs lower prices, and increase consumption. Canadian factories unable to supply the demand are increasing their factory capacity. The wail of woe has died out ; in its place is the merry hum of industry. Production in Canada reached the highest point in history in June, while during the same month American production fell off. This, of course, was predicted by scores of Liberal and Progressive speakers, while the budget was under discussion.

The fact is the whole Meighen argument is absurd and false. Where it is not one it is the other. But the public knows one thing—the price of cars is down. That fact Mr. Meighen will find on Election Day has stuck, and stuck solidly in the minds of the people.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Lunatic.

At that name the three criminals blanched and trembled. Abruptly, then, they knew why it was that they had been so subservient to the man of mystery—it was the inevitable tribute of the outlaw to the chief, the instinctive yielding of homage from their kind to the supreme in crime. It never occurred to them to doubt the truth of this revelation. Wainwright had avoided any explanation to them concerning Andrew's identity.

"Don't be frightened by a name," he cried, sharply. "Why, you're as silly as children scared by the bogey man. He has determined already to throw you to the wolves. But if you still stand by me, between us we shall send him where he can no longer injure you or me or any other human being."

It was evident that the force and conviction with which Wainwright presented his plea were not without a considerable effect on the alarmed trio.

"It is really a farce," Andrew said. "And you actually expect to do this thing, to dispose of me thus completely, with the aid of these persons here assembled—this imposing array?" He pointed scornfully at the trio of criminals, who winced despite their new access of courage. "Well truly I am interested," he continued, jeeringly. "I am, in fact, so much interested that I am disposed to give you all the assistance in my power. And let me add, Mr. Wainwright, that I await your pleasure in this proceeding with all the more anticipation of agreeable entertainment because I know out of my own experience how accustomed you are to dealing with crooks to further your own ends."

"I venture to promise that you will not be disappointed," Wainwright rejoined, with mordant emphasis. The entrance of Parker halted him, who said:

"Dr. Forbes is here, sir."

Now a little gleam of triumph shone in Wainwright's eyes, which Andrew, watching narrowly, detected.

"One moment, Parker," Wainwright directed. Then he regarded the Master

Marshall Moved to a Place Near the Door.

Mind for an instant contemplatively. "It is not yet too late for you to withdraw," he suggested. "I give you that option." Yet he had no hope of winning thus easily, and the result justified his lack of confidence, for Andrew chuckled only a single word, insolently:

"Proceed!"

Andrew moved to an inconspicuous position by the wall across the room from Wainwright. His manner was wholly unconcerned, save for a mere flickering light of anticipation, which Lucene observed apprehensively. Marshall moved to a place near the door, in obedience to Wainwright's order. The others remained as they had been, but all exhibited something of new alertness, for now, at last, the crisis was come. Soon the door was opened by Parker, who stood aside to permit the entrance of Dr. Forbes. The physician advanced quickly to the master of the house, who, with Lucene, rose to greet him.

Dr. Forbes bowed acknowledgment of Lucene's invitation to a seat, as she herself returned to her chair, but he chose to remain standing, while he glanced about the room over the ill assorted group with an expression of professional expectancy.

"What is the trouble?" he questioned.

"As a matter of fact, doctor," Wainwright explained, "we've called rather lively evening—or night, I might better say—here in the house. The thing has been a bit bothersome, taking it first and last. I shall give you the full details as to all that has occurred in due course; but now it would take too much time. The upshot of the whole matter is that we've got a lunatic in our usually quiet and respectable home. Naturally, we want you to take him off our hands."

"A lunatic, eh?" he said. "I had hardly anticipated anything of the sort, since I have some acquaintance with you all. Some stranger, I suppose."

Wainwright shook his head emphatically.

"No," he said decisively, "not a stranger—not by any means a stranger." He raised his arm and pointed toward Andrew. "There he is!"

The physician's first astonishment now became an unqualified amazement, as his eyes followed the direction indicated by his friend's gesture.

"What—Andrew?" he demanded.

Wainwright nodded regretfully.

"Yes," he said.

Andrew himself was standing motionless, in a posture of particular humility. His eyes were downcast, his hands were clasped as if in mute appeal. The expression of his countenance was shamefaced, with a feeble, varying smile of deprecation. Dr. Forbes surveyed the unexpected patient for a full minute, scrutinizing the dejected attitude, the disconsolate face.

"Is he violent?" he asked first.

"Well, no; he hasn't shown any symptoms of a violent sort as yet," Wainwright admitted. "But, as is natural, I think Mrs. Wainwright is afraid he may get dangerous at any moment, and I must confess for my own part that I, too, feel nervous concerning the matter. Lucene has noticed that he has been acting very oddly for some days. I've been so busy with the work of my campaign that I failed to pay much attention to him myself. But the others of the family, being less occupied, have observed his peculiar actions, and tonight the thing came to a head."

"Ah, I see!" the physician remarked noncommittally. "Now, Cortland, I wish you to explain to me as accurately as your untrained mind will enable you to do the exact details of the disorder displayed by our unfortunate patient here."

"Why, as to that," was the answer, "the poor man seems to have the most extraordinary notions about the character of my wife's relatives. That would be strange enough by itself. But it is worse than that. His delusion even goes so far that he has the most monstrous ideas about my wife herself in spite of the fact that hitherto he has appeared devoted to her service, and there can be no doubt that he himself actually believes these absurd hallucinations. My brother-in-law, I believe, was the first to notice this feature of his insanity. Perhaps you would wish him to tell you himself." Wainwright fixed his glance inquisitively on Walter and addressed him by name, with a veiled note of reproach in his tones. "Please tell Dr. Forbes what Andrew said about you."

"Who, me?" she gasped.

"Oh," Walter explained jauntily, "I've noticed the old chap looking kind of queer for several days now!" He turned toward Blount boyishly. "You remember my speaking to you about it, don't you, dad?"

"Why, yes, son!" he replied. "Now, let me see, that was"— He paused meditatively as if searching his memory.

"It was the day before yesterday at luncheon. I spoke of it as soon as Andrew was out of the room," Walter declared glibly.

Blount grunted affirmatively.

"That's right, son," he agreed. "That was the time you spoke of it, and then you had it out with him, you know."

"Yes," Walter resumed. "Why, he actually had the nerve to accuse me—me of being a jewelry thief!"

"Indeed!" Forbes ejaculated.

"Yes, and what's more," Walter added, encouraged by his success thus far and becoming recklessly audacious, "he had the collosal nerve to say he knew I had done time in Sing Sing."

"Um! Singular!" the physician commented.

"He said things to dad too. Tell what he said to you, dad."

Blount crowded back his fears.

"Why," he exclaimed, "the fellow called me a bank burglar!"

"Most extraordinary!" Forbes declared.

Blount shot a glance toward his wife. "You heard him, Sadie," he said, with a significant inflection.

Mrs. Blount standing beside Lucene's chair, started.

"Who, me?" she gasped, alarmed.

Blount scowled at her.

"Yes, you! I say you heard him. Didn't you? Sure you did—sure you did!"

When she observed the mandatory stare of her husband she deemed it the part of prudence to do his implied bidding.

"Oh, yes—I remember now," she said airily in her rich voice, in which was no tremor. "Sure I heard him. And you just ought to have heard what he called me. The very idea!" Her face became all the expression of indignation set in lines of virtuous indignation. "Oh, doctor, really it was too terrible! Why, he had the audacity to say that I was a—a shoplifter from Milwaukee! And all I ever knew about Milwaukee is what I've read in the beer advertisements!" she exclaimed again indignantly.

CHAPTER XIX.

Mad Madness.

Wainwright addressed the physician confidently:

"You see, now, Harry, how it is. The thing came to a climax tonight, when I began, with the friendliest intention, to ask him some questions concerning his health. He just glared at me, as if I were trying to do him some injury instead of really wanting to help him in his troubles. And then, all of a sudden, he proceeded to make the most preposterous demands you could possibly imagine. First he repeated all these strange imaginings of which you have been hearing here tonight, and then he even was so wild as to tackon one in which he stated that my wife, too, had been convicted of theft and been sent to jail.

"To tell the truth, doctor," he continued, "I couldn't make head or tail out of his maunderings. And Lucene got so worried that, finally, as you are an examiner in lunacy, with the power of commitment, I thought the best thing would be to get you over here and let you take him away and put him safely under observation for a while."

"Andrew, come here, please," the physician ordered.

"Yes, sir." The answer was uttered with the utmost respect. The Master Mind immediately advanced to a position just in front of Forbes, where he remained standing quietly.

"You have heard what was said?"

"Oh, yes, sir. To my great surprise, sir."

"Ah! to your great surprise, eh? Why did you say these things?"

"I don't remember having them, sir. Really, sir, it doesn't seem possible to me that I could ever have said such dreadful things about the family of my employer."

"Now tell me the exact truth," Forbes continued. "Do you think that Mr. Walter is a thief?"

"No, indeed, sir," he disclaimed.

"Or that Mr. Blount is a bank burglar?"

"Oh, no, sir—no, never, sir. Nor that about Mrs. Blount either."

"Why did you threaten Mr. Wainwright, saying that if he refused to do your bidding you would publish these stories in the newspapers?"

"I'm very sorry, sir," Andrew responded, with a quick reversion to his former meek manner, "but I don't remember anything about it, sir."

"Do you dislike Mr. Wainwright?" was the next inquiry.

"Oh, goodness—no, sir!"

"Or Mrs. Wainwright?"

"Oh, no, sir—oh, no, indeed, sir. Very far! Not—not at all."

"I am glad to hear you speak in this fashion," Forbes said approvingly. "Nevertheless, my good man, it appears on indisputable testimony that you have said these curious and offensive things. What have you to say to me as to that fact?"

Again Andrew looked up.

"Well, sir," he said, "to tell the truth, I am not surprised. A thing like it happened to me once before, sir." There was a general movement of astonishment, in which even the physician shared, at this candid avowal of his unfortunate mental condition. "Yes, sir," he went on, with obvious reluctance, dropping his eyes; "I lost my last place before this in the same way."

"Well, now, Andrew," said Dr. Forbes, "how would you like to go along with me for just a little while to get rested up a bit, you know?"

But the patient displayed a sudden and unexpected animation in opposition to this proposal.

"Oh, no, indeed! Not to an—an insane asylum—no, no!" He wrung his hands dispairingly, and his face became written with fear. "Oh, I am sure that would drive me mad, indeed!"

"But you surely need a change of some kind, Andrew," he urged.

"I know that, sir," he said softly. "I know it only too well, sir." Then a little more of spirit crept into his expression. He took a letter from his pocket and held it forth to the physician. "I had thought that this might be the thing for me," he ended as Forbes took the letter. "It is from a cousin of mine down in Virginia, sir."

The physician scanned the missive.

"I see," he said thoughtfully. "As I understand it, then, you have entertained the idea of going down there and living with your cousin, for some time at least, on his farm. Are you still of a mind to follow this course, Andrew, if you should be allowed?"

The patient's face brightened, and his hands were raised in a movement of entreaty.

"Oh, sir, if I only might!" he cried. "I should like it so very, very much, sir!"

"Good!" came Forbes' crisp comment. He turned briskly to Wainwright. "That's the best way out of the difficulty, Cortland, by all means," he advised. "Under the circumstances, now, an asylum would be the very worst place in the world for him. Really, Cortland, I couldn't think of advising it."

Despite Wainwright's efforts Dr. Forbes refused to commit Andrew, and he departed, leaving the oddly assorted group in the library.

The air of humility now fell from Andrew as might a garment when he strode forward, so that he faced the others closely.

"Ingenious, Mr. Wainwright!" he said, with cold irony. "Oh, it was really quite ingenious. Its one demerit was that it proved so utterly inefficient." He looked slowly over the others in the room, with the exception of Lucene, from whom he held his gaze studiously averted. None of the three criminals who had joined in the futile revolt against him ventured to meet his eyes. They sat in nervous dejection, expectant of coridign punishment. Andrew smiled as he contemplated them, and the smile boded ill. The smile grew amusedly contemplative as he regarded Marshall, who was scowling heavily; then of a sudden the Master Mind's face set itself in stern lines. He spoke with authority.

"Mr. Wainwright will excuse you now," he said briskly to the detective.

Marshall started indignantly.

"I'm under Mr. Wainwright's orders and following his instructions. Otherwise the situation would be different," he growled wrathfully. "I guess you understand that."

Andrew did not trouble himself to reply. It was Wainwright who reenforced the command.

"It was at this hour of the morning, Mr. Wainwright," he said, with profound solemnity, "that my brother died—that he was put to death. Well, sir, the time agreed on between us has come. What is your choice?"

Wainwright spoke very quietly, firmly, yet with a sadness that told the greatness of his sacrifice.

"You leave me no choice," he said simply. "You have won. I shall retire from public life."

"Today, you remember."

"I remember—today."

Lucene started up.

"No, no!" she breathed wildly. She went swiftly to her husband and placed her two hands on his shoulders and looked down into his face with her eyes twin flames of dusky azure, burning through a mist of tears. "Oh, my dear, you can't—you can't! No, I say, you shan't! I can't bear you do this dreadful thing—no, no! Oh, let me go instead—you must! I can't spoil your life like this, dear. Let me go—let me go!"

Wainwright ordered the three crooks and the detective to leave the room.

In Wainwright's eyes shone unutterable love for the beautiful woman whose heart was so torn by anguish brought upon her through love of him. At least he must strive to comfort her, to assuage her grief, since her love remained to him. As for this other thing, it was, after all, by comparison, a little thing. Yet, even as he thought so, he knew the difficulty that he checked the groan that rose to his lips. It is no light thing to tear out by the roots the honorable ambition of a strong man's lifetime.

The husband's voice was colorless.

"What would be the use?" he said sadly. "As to your leaving me, why, wherever you might go I should follow." The wife buried her face in her hands and shook with sobbing.

"There, there!" he cried soothingly, distraught by her agony. He stood up and drew her into his arms, caressing her hair with exquisite tenderness in the gentle touch of his fingers. "Hush, hush, darling! Don't you know, Lucene, that I have you, and so nothing—nothing else—matters?"

The scene failed somehow to give its evil genius the bliss he had thought to find in it. This lovers' rapture made a mock of his vengeance. Yet, even as he asserted this to himself, Andrew knew in his soul that he lied; that the venom of his punishment was even stronger than he had guessed to poison the well of his enemy's hopes and its virulence would increase, not lessen. Nevertheless there was disappointment to him here in the hour of triumph. He had gained all for which he had striven—yes, all! And something more—the misery of Lucene!

In a fury of rage against his own weakness Andrew thrust the thought of Lucene from him. His voice broke gratingly.

"Your resignation in writing, Mr. Wainwright, if you please."

Wainwright spoke listlessly.

"I will write it in my study at once and bring it to you here. Come with me, Lucene."

Abruptly, violently, the wife tore herself from his arms. As he rested motionless, amazed, she darted to Andrew, clutched his wrist in her two hands, when he would have recoiled involuntarily before this onslaught of the woman he had wronged. Her voice came softly, haltingly, painfully weighted with the burden of love's tragedy. The violet eyes, humid, tender, infinitely pathetic in their pleading, met those of the man in his gaze aside and held him in their spell.

"Oh, Andrew," she cried, "I have trusted you—I have loved you! Because of that I have tried to think how you could do this terrible thing to me."

"Must we go into that now?" the man demanded roughly as she paused. He felt his strength slipping from him. He felt his wrath leaping high, wrath against himself, against fate—not against her.

"Yes, we must," she said bravely, "for I may never speak to you again. I have tried to think what it could be. And now at last I know! I understand at last. It was because you loved your brother so much—because you loved him so that nothing else mattered at all. Isn't that it, Andrew?"

"Yes, that is it," he answered husklily.

"But don't you see—don't you see?" she questioned with the fierceness of one bereaved. "You've hated the man I love. And because you think he sacrificed your brother you have vowed now you will sacrifice me in the same way. Don't you see, Andrew?" Her eyes probed the farthest recesses of his soul. They tortured him with their poignant reproach, yet he could not turn from them so great was the strength of her weakness.

But, though he shuddered to feel, he still struggled impotently against her, against a self he thought dead.

"No, no!" he murmured. "No, I"—

Lucene went on:

"You can't ruin his life, Andrew, without ruining mine too. You can't—you can't!" Her voice's music rose throbbing. "Don't you care what becomes of me, Andrew? Do you know you are turning my love into hate? You don't want that. Oh, you don't! I know you don't, Andrew. You are not going to tell me now that hate, not love, is to rule your life and mine. Oh, surely, Andrew, you are not going to send me through the rest of my life hating you as you have hated him—not that! No, Andrew, you can't—I tell you, you can't!"

Slowly, at last, the lids drooped over Andrew's eyes. He turned his head a little, with a movement of lassitude. Then the lids were lifted again, and he looked full into the eyes of Wainwright, and his own were inscrutable. In his voice sounded a note of futile remonstrance against destiny.

"I've hated you for years," he said quietly, "as you know very well. You are aware also that my hatred of you has been my ruling passion since its beginning. In that time, all my days, yes, every waking hour, have been devoted to the task of accomplishing your ruin. This is the instant of my triumph. I hold you here in the hollow of my hand, with the power and the will to crush you. Well, sir, I—open my hand—and let you go."

An imperious gesture restrained the exclamation that rose to Wainwright's lips.

"The explanation of this inconsistency is very simple. It lies in the fact that I am a fool—the greatest fool in all this world of fools. So, because I am such a fool, you are safe from me, Mr. Wainwright—now, and always. I wish you good morning." He moved toward the door.

But the wife, radiant in an instant, would not have it so.

"Andrew!" she cried. "Oh, thank God!—not only for our happiness, but for your sake, too, since love has conquered hate, at last!"

The Master Mind spoke heavily.

"I only know," he said confusedly, "that the most unlikely thing in all the world has happened. I mean that in the hour of victory my triumph has turned out the most hollow mouth. I only know that, since I cannot crush my enemy alone, I cannot crush him at all. No other could, I think, but you, Lucene—you've beaten me."

Lucene spoke very gently.

"Then I was right all along time. You did love me, and you do still?"

Andrew shook his head doubtfully.

"I only know," he said, "that I cannot do you harm."

Lucene made an impulsive step as if to follow him, then checked herself. This man still held in his heart hatred for the husband she loved.

"Where will you go, Andrew?"

He answered very gently, sadly:

"I do not know—only, not back into the shadows whence I came." He paused for a little, and added, wistfully: "Be happy, Lucene, and remember sometimes, if you will, that, after all, it was I who brought you your happiness." Then he went quickly from the room, and so out of their lives. But the happiness that had been his gift abode with them always.

Colborne, Ontario.—"When I was first married I was very thin and weak. The doctor said I was weak and would never be able to have a child, but I did, and from the time my baby came I suffered all the time and doctored and took medicine. Life became a burden, and doctors said an operation would help me, but my husband was opposed to that. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine advertised, so I told my husband that I thought I would try it, that I might get some relief, ——— — I had not taken one bottle when I could feel it helping me. I took five bottles and had better health. Now I have three girls and a boy and have done my work up to confinement. I am now at the Change of Life and owe my good health to Lydia E. THE NEWFOUNDLAND DOG.

Is Simply a Large, Somewhat Specialized Water-Spaniel.

Considerable obscurity surrounds the origin of the Newfoundland dog—one of the handsomest, most intelligent and romantically celebrated of all breeds, yet now among the varieties of the dog-world. One thing is certain, the dog is not a native, pre-discovery, Newfoundlander. The dog of the Beothuk Indians, who inhabited the island when it began to receive visits from European fishermen and adventurers in the sixteenth century, were of the Eskimo type, showing none of the points of the breed we are discussing; they were sledgedogs provided with a thick coating of under-fur through which protruded the long hairs of the outer coat. As the Indians and their dogs diminished and settlers came to replace them, the latter brought with them European dogs, among which, no doubt, were some of the bigger sorts, mastiffs, bloodhounds and especially, it is said, some of a ferocious breed of pointers then common in Spain, whence most of the earlier cod-fishers came. "These crossed miscellaneously with the Indian dogs, but," as we are told, "the pointer especially seems to have introduced into the double-coated native his color, size, intelligence and keen scent—all qualities well marked in the Newfoundland as he came into European knowledge at the end of the eighteenth century."

This is a theory advanced long ago by a serious writer; but I am not disposed to accept it, says a writer in the Montreal Weekly Star, except in part, rejecting especially the theory that the Spanish-Portuguese pointer is the most influential ancestor of the breed. I believe, with Jowatt, the author of standard works on domestic dogs and horses, supported more recently by Lydekker, a distinguished English naturalist, that the Newfoundland dog is simply a large, somewhat specialized water-Spaniel, derived possibly from a combination of the Irish water-spaniel and the (originally French) Columbia Spaniel. Both these were large water-loving dogs, weighing from 50 to 65 pounds and both would be likely to be among the earliest European dogs to be acclimated in the island. All the characteristics of the present dog point to descent from such spaniels, rather than from anything else; and I doubt whether mixture with the native Indian dog had much, if anything, to do with it. I think the accompanying illustration bears out my interpretation of the origin.

So highly esteémed was the Newfoundland dog a century or a century and a half ago, for his wonderful swimming and retrieving powers, that he was almost entirely exported in exchange for high prices, so that by 1890 a survey showed none left except in a few outlying islands.

THE TRUE SPORTSMAN.

Interested In Conserving Our Natural Resources.

The true sportsman is one who, thoroughly enjoying the benefits of our forests, fish and game, is personally interested in conserving these natural resources, not only for his own use, but for those who are to follow him. He believes with Ruskin that "God has lent us the earth for our life. It is a great entail. It belongs as much to those who are to come after us as to us, and we have no right by anything we do or neglect, to involve them in any unnecessary penalties, or to deprive them of the benefit which was in our power to bequeath."

We must face the basic principle that without forest cover game cannot live nor will waters be conserved to preserve the fish life which inhabits our streams. It is, therefore, only through the preservation of our forests and the intelligent use of marsh lands, which have been the natural habitat of ducks and waterfowl, that future citizens will know the pleasures which sportsmen have heretofore enjoyed.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE

Constituency of Prince Edward-Lennox

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

On Saturday, July 31st last, a representative Liberal convention tendered me an unanimous nomination to be their candidate at the forthcoming Federal election.

To the unity and good will there displayed, I felt it not only an honor, but a duty to meet the conventions' wishes. If elected I shall do my best, not merely to represent you from the Liberal party standpoint, but in the far wider field to try and uphold fairly the interests of the people as a whole, without respect to party, race or creed.

As the time between now and Polling Day is brief, and this constituency a large and difficult one to cover, there will necessarily be many electors whom, I regret, it will be impossible to meet ; this being so, I would like each one of you at least to receive this letter.

The Liberal Party, under the Right Hon. Mackenzie King, appeals to the people of Canada at this time on two main issues :

1st—On its record.

2nd—On constitutional Self Government.

The Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, at present Prime Minister of Canada, is by no means a new and untried public servant. This indeed is not the first time he has assumed the Premiership without consulting the wishes of the people. In 1920, after the war was over, and demobilization had taken place, in spite of promises to the contrary, Mr. Meighen, without consulting the people, formed that short-lived government known as the National Liberal and Conservative Administration. It was a great hypocrisy from the outset as the name itself would indicate. Nevertheless, he held on to office without an election for a further year and a half. What was his record during this period ? You will remember it was perhaps the most trying time the people of Canada ever passed through. It was the zero point for all classes of the people. Agriculture was at its lowest ebb, and the farming community, through low prices for their products and high prices for their purchases were left groaning in helplessness.

Did Mr. Meighen and his Colleagues attempt anything constructive to lessen the hardship of this situation even if we set down its cause as largely due to the war ? Did he tackle the question of lowering the duties and taxes on agricultural implements and other instruments of production as Mr. King did shortly after being returned to power ? Did he attempt to put in practice his policy of higher duties and taxes ? Not a bit of it. He did nothing at all constructive and was hopelessly defeated so soon as he came before the people. Not securing a single seat in five or six of the great Provinces of the Dominion. All we got in this unhappy regime of his was heavy expenditure, higher deficits and large additions to a mounting and burdensome debt.

How different the record of the Hon. Mr. King and his government. From the outset in 1922 improvements commenced and continued in spite of all the pessimism indulged in by his opponents. Trade and industry gradually improved and expanded. With economy and a sane fiscal policy, together with good crops and an improved world condition, the country has come out of the gloom which it was in in 1920-21, into the sunshine of prosperity. So great is our present prosperity in almost all directions, that the Hon. Mr. Robb, the Finance Minister, was able to lower taxation and remove burdens from the shoulders of every man and woman in Canada at the last session of Parliament.

You already know what the Government has done in lessening your taxes. They did not give you mere promises. They exempted from income tax all married people with the incomes up to $3,000 per year, and lowered the tax on salaried people all along the line. They abolished the receipt tax, gave penny postage, a boon to every person who writes letters, and by lowering the duty and exempting certain classes of cars from sales tax, helped to lower materially the prices of all motor cars, trucks and motorcycles, and yet this had the double effect, not only helping the purchasers, but also the industry itself, by the great increase the lower prices caused for the demand for cars. Mr. Hubbs, the Conservative candidate, opposed and tried to criticise these fine achievements on your behalf. Are you not satisfied with these results ? Would you like to have these good measures reversed ? Would you like to see the tariff raised again on agricultural implements, motors and other articles in spite of the proof that has been given you, that prices for these can be lowered and yet the industries concerned helped to flourish more than even on reasonable profits for the manufacturers but larger turnover in sales.

In the closing days of the session when Mr. King saw that intrigue and worse was going on, both in the House of Commons and the Senate, and that government could not longer be carried on in parliament with due decorum, the majority being too slim and uncertain, he advised His Excellency, the Governor General on the wisdom of a dissolution in order to let the people correct the situation with a fresh parliament. To the surprise of all great constitutional authorities, and against the precedent and custom of the British constitution for several generations at least, The Governor on the responsibility of Mr. Meighen refused to grant Mr. King dissolution. Mr. Meighen must have assured the Governor that he could carry on without an election and took advantage of the Umpire spirit in which The Governor viewed the situation to grasp for the second time the Premiership of Canada without the consent of the people. You all know the rest. Mr. Meighen tried to overide parliament with a sham ministry of acting ministers, not one of whom had taken the departmental oath of office, and yet they had the effrontery to come to the House of Commons without resigning their seats and being reaffirmed in them in a constitutional and legal way, and ask for supply of millions of dollars which they could expend or make contracts without any regular legal authority for so doing.

Calling it a temporary Government or one to be formed does not get one over the serious situation that it constituted, and the utter disregard for the sacredness of the constitution, making of it a scrap of paper in order to gratify the ambition of Mr. Meighen to be once again Prime Minister and to have its prestige and the power of the machinery that goes with that office when an appeal should be made to the people.

The members of the House of Commons voted censure on this Shadow Government, saying in parliamentary language that it had infringed its right and privileges. Even then, with the House of Commons against him in this way, the first time since Confederation any Government had been so condemned, still, instead of resigning as he ought certainly to have done if he had had proper respect for the constitution, Mr. Meighen advised His Excellency to grant him a violent dissolution contrary to all British and Canadian practice and custom. Although all the members of the Commons and Senate were in the Capital and the Governor also, Parliament was dissolved without the usual prorogation and the giving assent thereat to all legislation agreed to by both Chambers.

We are all loyal subjects of His Majesty the King and of His representative the Governor, for whom personally we have the greatest esteem. We all love and are loyal to the British flag, but above all we are devoted to and prize the British constitution whose symbols these are.

Our opponents, in order to cover the unconstitutional advice given to His Excellency the Governor General by Mr. Meighen, and to obscure the splendid record of the King Government with its great tax reductions, have sought to make an issue of the irregularities in the custom's department. The Mackenzie King administration has no desire to hide any wrong doing, or shield any wrong-doers, and proved this amply by immediately commencing an investigation so soon as complaints had been made.

It was a leakage from the Liberal Government's own investigation into its own department that was carried to Mr. Stevens and which formed the basis of his much exaggerated charges.

Both Liberal and Conservative officials were found to have committed breaches of trust and the report recommended penalties therefor. Whilst the fact that smugglers have been able to evade the regulations under all party administrations and are probably successfully doing so at the present time, still we recognize that this is no excuse for such a condition and the King Government proves by its adoption of the Duncan Report its determination to clean up the Department and take such measures as the situation requires.

I close by merely alluding to the serious charge made by Mr. Hubbs when nominated. He declared that the Progressive Party in the House had broken faith with Mr. Meighen by voting against his Shadow Government and not allowing him to proceed as he wished. The Progressives did of course desire the business of the Session to be completed in an orderly way, but not at the expense of legal and constitutional practice, they made no pledges to approve such procedure and it will go down in history to the credit of the Progressives that they helped hurl from power a man who cared nothing for the will of the people or constitutional rules and usages.

Fellow electors this is a brief outline contrasting the administration of the Hon. Mr. King with that of the Hon. Mr. Meighen. It is really a short political sketch of the gradual rise of Canada from its low and gloomy point in 1920-21 under Mr. Meighen up to the prosperity of to-day under Mr. King.

I appeal to you as a lover of our own country, proud of its equal status as a self-governing unit within a united, free British Commonwealth of Nations, to declare by your votes that the discretionary power over dissolution rests in the hands of the Governor General's advisers as it does in the Motherland with the advisers of His Majesty the King.

Yours faithfully,

H. H. HORSEY.

Here and There

Mayor Martin, of Montreal, on behalf of 100 pilgrims to the Eucharistic Congress at Chicago, recently presented a handsome engraved gold watch to Edward P. Whalan, city ticket agent of the C.P.R., at Windsor Station, Montreal, in appreciation of the care and attention bestowed upon them by Mr. Whalan, who accompanied the party on their journey to Chicago.

The second greatest half-year in the history of the Canadian Pacific Railway has been completed with the month of July, the official financial statement for this period showing an increase in the gross earnings over the preceding six months of $10,971,966.56. The increase in the net profits for the same period amounted to $6,159,041, or an increase nearly double that of the previous half year in 1925.

Following a slight recession in April the production of automobiles in Canada continued its upward trend in May to reach a new high level of 24,934 units, valued at $15,761,615. This output compares with 21,502 units, worth $13,754,390 in the previous month. For the five months ending May the cumulative production was 103,127 units, valued at $62,685,152, as against 78,227 units valued at $49,497,988 in the corresponding period last year.

Canada leads the nations of the world in the proportion of years of prosperity to years of depression, says a report now in preparation by the National Bureau of Economic Research, Ltd., an American organization. Covering the period 1884-1924, Canada shows 1.86 years of prosperity per year of depression. The United States comes next on the list with 1.79 years of prosperity per year of depression, covering the period 1890-1923.

Definite indications of the largest building year Canada has had in more than a decade are now shown by the record of the first six months of this year. The very large and unusual total of $194,543,600 worth of new construction for the first half of the current year and contemplated new work to the value of $304,598,500 forecasts great activity for the remaining months. During June contracts awarded totalled $54,186,400, an increase over June, 1925, of 63 per cent.

One of the greatest foundations upon which the Canadian national spirit rests was laid by the Canadian Pacific Railway was the conviction uttered by J. D. Cameron, of Glasgow, in an address before an audience at Pembroke recently. "Not merely did this railroad act," he said, "as a bond between all the provinces of the Confederation, but it was, by its conception and final construction, a greater force than anything else for the unification of the scattered provinces."

The sea-faring settlers of the Hebrides are not all fishermen as one might expect, but farmers in a small way known in the rugged northern Islands as crofters. Father R. A. MacDonnell, the clergyman in charge of the immigration of these hardy folk to Western Canada, disclosed this interesting point recently en route to his headquarters at Red Deer, Alberta. Father MacDonnell has been in Canada about fifteen years and has been engaged in immigration work during that time.

The Earl of Clarendon is responsible for the statement that of the 25 families whom he personally interviewed, sent out to Canada under the Overseas Settlement League, he has not met with one malcontent. He intimated that the settlers were unanimous in the opinion that Canada had been good to them. His Lordship, accompanied by the Countess of Clarendon and their three children, Lord Hyde, Lady Joan Villers and Hon. Nicholas Villers, is making a study of the immigration problem as he travels to Banff, Lake Louise, and other points west in the Dominion.

$100,000 HOME FOR EXHIBITION

Belleville Exhibition Park is a busy scene these days, with many men working at the various improvements undertaken this season. When the beautiful grounds were opened for the first time in the public last fall it was the general opinion that no finer grounds for an agricultural fair or general recreation park could be found anywhere. Certainly no city under fifty thousand inhabitants has anything on Belleville in the way of an Exhibition Park. This season an additional thirty thousand dollars is being spent in improvements and when the Belleville Agricultural Exhibition opens on Tuesday, August 31, it will be housed in an Exhibition Park worth one hundred thousand dollars.

No fined buildings can be found anywhere, no finer track, and everything about the park is artistic, convenient and attractive.

New Agricultural exhibit building, 100 x 60 feet.

Addition to Poultry Building of fifty feet, practically doubling capacity.

Building of new roads about the grounds and additional exit gate for motors, etc.

Erection of new, ornamental fountain and Band Stand facing Yeomans Street by Board of Parks Commissioners as part of new recreation park for the west side.

"Meet Me at the Fountain" will soon be a favorite slogan here as well as at the National Exhibition.

A long, level and wide avenue has been laid out for the Midway, one of the most popular places during the fair, which this year will be larger and better than ever with plenty of fun for everybody.

There will be bands of music and entertainment galore during the four big days and nights of the Belleville Fair.
